From readings to receptions, don't miss a single event.

Rosemary Magee
2013 Emory Report article: Remembering Seamus Heaney

The writer called “An Irish Village at Emory.”

Forms a centerpiece of its vibrant Irish collections, what one in 1988. Heaney's archive housed at MARBLcampus community at no charge.

Kevin Young, Rosemary Magee to take part in Atlanta Music Festival

Kevin Young, one of the nation’s premier poets, novelist, and essayist, will be the keynote speaker at Emory Libraries’ annual Atlanta Music Festival. The festival, held Sept. 18-21, is the only annual performing arts event in Atlanta dedicated to African American concert music.

On Sept. 18, Young will present “Music for the Future: Rethinking the American Dream,” a keynote speech that will unpack the role music plays in defining our nation and the American Experience.

Young will also deliver the annual Terence C. Tong Lecture at 8 p.m. Sept. 21 in the Schwartz Center for Performing Arts at Emory.

Prior to the ticketed concert are a series of free events, including a very Emory-centric one. Kevin Young, one of the nation’s premier poets, novelist, and essayist, will be the keynote speaker at Emory Libraries’ annual Atlanta Music Festival. The festival, held Sept. 18-21, is the only annual performing arts event in Atlanta dedicated to African American concert music.

On Sept. 18, Young will present “Music for the Future: Rethinking the American Dream,” a keynote speech that will unpack the role music plays in defining our nation and the American Experience.

Young will also deliver the annual Terence C. Tong Lecture at 8 p.m. Sept. 21 in the Schwartz Center for Performing Arts at Emory.

Prior to the ticketed concert are a series of free events, including a very Emory-centric one. Kevin Young, one of the nation’s premier poets, novelist, and essayist, will be the keynote speaker at Emory Libraries’ annual Atlanta Music Festival. The festival, held Sept. 18-21, is the only annual performing arts event in Atlanta dedicated to African American concert music.

On Sept. 18, Young will present “Music for the Future: Rethinking the American Dream,” a keynote speech that will unpack the role music plays in defining our nation and the American Experience.

Young will also deliver the annual Terence C. Tong Lecture at 8 p.m. Sept. 21 in the Schwartz Center for Performing Arts at Emory.

Prior to the ticketed concert are a series of free events, including a very Emory-centric one.