EMORY LIBRARIES ANNOUNCE HOLIDAY HOURS

Libraries across campus have announced their hours for the Thanksgiving weekend; the intersession period between semesters; and the Christmas and New Year’s holidays.

This year, the libraries in the Robert W. Woodruff Library building – including the Main Library, the Marian K. Heilbrun Music and Media Library, the Manuscript, Archives and Rare Book Library and Goizueta Business Library – will be closed Saturdays and Sundays during the intersession period. They also will be closed the Wednesday through Sunday of Christmas week and New Year’s week, said Charles Forrest, Emory’s director of facilities management and planning.

“We are among a few academic libraries in the city that have offered hours on weekends between semesters,” Forrest said. “An analysis of our entrance and exit data from past years showed that most users of our building during those periods are not members of the Emory community, and that the numbers are extremely low.

“We can conserve energy and be fiscally prudent by closing and turning off as many lights as possible during those days,” Forrest said.

A complete schedule of openings and closings for all campus academic and professional libraries follows.
